REPORT NO.

1. The most significant concentrations of Soviet troops on Rumanian territory are in the Danubian regions of the Banat and in Dobrudja. The "chief aim" of General Tolbukhin's army, whose headquarters are in Constanta, appears to be the Rumanian-Yugoslav border. Among these troop movements, a corps of tanks has been concentrated in the Banat and another in Oltenia, an infantry division in the Banat, two in Oltenia, and one in Muntenia.
2. The Soviet air forces in Rumania have recently been reinforced with "combat airplanes of the latest type".
3. The Russians have enormous dumps of supplies and ammunition in the regions of Galati, Braila, Buzău, Constanta, Giurgiu, Calafat, Craiova, Slatina, and Turnu-Severin. A strong network of communications is being constructed by the Soviets in the Dobrudja area and along the Danube from Galati to Turnu-Severin.
